The Daily News.

NEWPORT.

Published every morning (Sundays excepted)
BY GEORGE T. HAMMOND,
At 123 Thames Street.

MONDAY, JULY 4, 1859.

In order to give those in our employ an opportunity to participate in the festivities of to-day, no paper will be issued from this office to-morrow.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

BEATS ALL!—Another quick trip has been achieved, this time by a Newport vessel, which will do to talk about. The sloop Vigilant, Capt. John Heath, discharged, last Monday morning, a cargo of coal at Fall River, sailed the same evening on the return trip to Port Bevan, having had winds every mile of the passage to New York, and on Saturday at 11 o'clock A. M. was again at the wharf in Fall River, with another cargo of coal—its absence of only 5-12 days. The distance sailed was about 100 miles. This, we think, will be hard to beat. Capt. Heath informs us that his last three trips between Fall River and Port Bevan have been made within 21 days, in which time he traded 522 tons of coal.

THE ASSAULTS AND HORRIBLES.—This grotesque organization will parade at 9 o'clock to-day. As this is their first appearance, some allowance must be made for deficiencies, though they will make a spread, notwithstanding. If practicable, they will march out to the light boat and partake of a fish chowder prepared for them by Capt. Pitman.

There were any quantity of elongated viagers about town last evening, consequent upon the rain, which dampened the prospect for the Fourth.

PERSONAL.—Col. A. Van Buren, of New York, is in town, stopping at the Filmore House.

The Disaster to the Argo.

St. John, N. F., June 30. All the Argo's passengers arrived here safe and well. The steamship left again to-day to bring up the crew and what was saved from the wreck. The following are, as near as can be gathered, the particulars of the disaster:

Between 3 and 4 A. M. Tuesday, made Cape Pine, bearing N. E. about 12 miles. The coast pilot, captain and all the officers were called on deck at the sight of land. The course was changed and made S. E. by E. This should have cleared her 15 miles from Cape Pine. About quarter past 4 a very dense fog came up; at about 5.30 the captain spoke a fishing schooner; stopped the engines and reversed them, asked them where they were fishing. The answer was, on the eastern side of Trepassy Bay, a mile and a half or two miles off.

The captain ordered the helm hard-a-port, and to go on at full speed, and keep her S. S. E. by the standard compass. This should have taken her clear of the land. The captain and all the officers were on deck, the officers in charge. The quartermaster at the wheel gave the order "steady" as the ship brought up to her S. S. E. course. At that moment breakers were seen—the engines were stopped and reversed full speed; before the ship got stern way she grounded, bow on the rocks, on Freshwater Point, eight miles from Trepassy. The boats were lowered and got ready, the passengers embarked with but little confusion, the women and children first. The anchors were passed out at the stern; the boats were thrown overboard forward, the boilers blown off, and every exertion made to get her off.

The Captain sent off a pilot with Mr. Butterfield in Trepassy harbor for assistance. They arrived at 10 o'clock and telegraphed here, when steamers De Witt and Blue Jacket were dispatched immediately.

Sails, &c., were sent ashore, and tents made to protect the passengers. Where provisions and luggage could be got at they were sent ashore. Boats were constantly passing from the shore to the crew, about a mile, carrying ashore what could be saved.

The fishermen plundered the ship; hundreds of them came around upon hearing the signal guns. They cut away her masts and completely skinned her.

At 4 P. M. the ship lifted and fell on her beam ends in six fathoms of water. The luggage of many of the passengers is lost.

There was no house within eight miles of the shore where she struck. At about 5 P. M. the boat returned from Trepassy, with assurance that two steamers were on their way from St. John, which comforted and quieted the passengers.

Tuesday night was passed in tents, with a tolerable degree of comfort. On Wednesday morning the steamers arrived and brought off the passengers and part of the luggage.

They return at 3 o'clock this afternoon for the crew, taking with them soldiers and police officers to recover what property was stolen from the ship. They can get divers to go to get anything that can be recovered from the wreck.

The passengers are all quartered and provided for here. They will be lodged and cared for and sent on as soon as arrangements can be made.

The City of Edinburgh is ready for sea, waiting the arrival of the Glasgow from New York to keep her company. It is probable that arrangements will be made to send passengers on to the Glasgow, if no earlier and better arrangements can be made.

How to Raise Squashes.

Says one who has had great success in this business:—

"This squash is a voracious feeder, and will do better planted on a manure heap than anywhere else. Dig holes eight feet apart each way, removing about a bushel of earth. Next throw in several shovelfuls of well rotted manure, mix the surface soil with it and plant upon the top. Put in from 15 to 20 seeds in a hill. Three plants are enough to stand in a hill, but the thinning process should not be gone through with till after the danger of attack from bugs is over. Sprinkle the plants with ashes, as soon as they break the ground, and repeat the process after every rain, until they become large enough to defy the bugs."

Paris Correspondence of the News.

JUNE 19, 1859.

Since my last, you have heard of Mantua, Palestro and Melegnano, and of the glorious achievements of our armies in Italy. The news of these victories have added, if possible, to the ardor of the French for the war. They are in fact, a truly warlike people and how could it be otherwise? They are brought up from their infancy, in ideas of glory and of battles. In the gymnasia, pupils are trained like soldiers; they rise and take their meals at the rattle of the drum, wear a military uniform and are rewarded for their application by the rank of sergeant or corporal. Poets, painters, artists, keep up the heroic spirit of the nation. The verses of Victor Hugo, of Lord Byron, the songs of Beranger, the paintings of Horace Vernet, the sketches of Chatter, are familiar to all school boys. Paris has quite a warlike aspect; you will not find a store nor a shop where there will not be something or other reminding you of the war. In one place you may see tents and camping baggages; in another, uniforms and arms; at the bookellers, works about war; at the picture dealers, maps of the seat of war, likenesses of French and Italian generals, engravings representing the different uniforms of the French army, &c., &c.

Nothing is spoken of but about the war, and the higher classes indulge in warlike amusements of all kinds. I assisted a few days ago at the hotel of the Countess F. to a dramatic representation, in which, of course, all the dramatical personae, belonging to the army. The title of one of the pieces was: The Zouave in Austria, and met with an enthusiastic reception.

A propos of Zouaves, these brave fellows, whose gallantry has been so conspicuous in the late engagements, are more popular than ever, and every volunteer wishes to enter that corps. Of course only those who have made their proofs somewhere or else are admitted, and the rejected ones console themselves with the idea, that they will behave in such a way as to be more successful at their next application.

Marshal McMahon enjoys here a fair fame, and the distinction conferred upon him has given general satisfaction. Whatever be the share of glory which Napoleon III. may add to that of the French nation, it will require some time yet, before the Parisians will forget the blood shed in 1851. Neither Canrobert, nor Forey, will ever be popular with them, for they have risen to favor, rather by their blind devotion to the Emperor than by services. They were ready in December 1851 to shoot the people without mercy. The French army can boast of scores of generals abler than Canrobert and who have no stain on their names. McMahon belongs to these latter. The announcement of the death of General Espinasse has met with a complete indifference. Espinasse, too, was a hero of December and his short administration as Minister of the Interior had not contributed to render him more popular.

The Minister of the Interior has authorized the literary newspapers, which are not subjected to the stamp, to publish the news about the war. These papers could till now only contain purely literary matters, and had no right to speak about politics. The Sicde, which is the organ of the Liberals, congratulates the Minister about this decision. "We consider this measure," says the Sicde, as a step towards liberty, and as widening the circle in which the press is kept in restraint."

The papers of Marseilles speak of the daily arrival at this place of prisoners. These are immediately transferred to the Ile "Sainte Marguerite," which has seen so many prisoners from the time of Louis XIV. to the present day.

Our newspapers are very interesting to read since every one of them has its correspondent in Italy, and these, as you have been informed, belong to their best writers.

The Journal de Debats says that about twenty Milanese ladies, belonging to the first aristocracy, have tendered their services as sisters of charity in the hospitals to the heroic children of the great Italian families who follow Garibaldi and Victor Emmanuel, and of which so many have already paid with their blood for the independence of their country. Among these ladies are to be found, says the French correspondent, women, fair, like the madonnas of Raphael, and whose husbands have torn themselves from their embraces to fight for liberty; valiant mothers, worthy to be compared to the ancient Roman mothers. The people uncover themselves with emotion before these women, as if before the image of the country. Another correspondent, speaking of the arrival of the Turcos at Genoa, says, that these children of Algeria, having landed on the wharf, seized their arms and demanded to be led immediately to the assault of the city, imagining that the Italians were the enemies they had come to fight, and they were hardly persuaded to consider the Piedmontese soldiers as friends. "Who are these men who don't speak French, and don't speak Arabic?" asked they of their officers. The wide world contains evidently but two races of men for the Turcos—the French and the Arabs.

We are expecting the news of some other battle very soon, for, as the French say, L'appetit vient en mangeant.

USES OF ICE.—In health no one ought to drink ice water, for it has occasioned inflammation of the stomach and bowels, and sometimes sudden death. The temptation to drink it is very great in summer; to use it at all with any safety the person should take but a single swallow at a time, take the glass from the lips for half a minute, and then another swallow, and so on. It will be found that in this way it becomes disagreeable after a few mouthfuls.

On the other hand, ice itself may be taken as freely as possible, not only without injury but with the most striking advantage in dangerous forms of disease. If broken in sizes of a pea or bean, and swallowed as freely as practicable, without much chewing or crushing between the teeth, it will often be efficient in checking various kinds of diarrhoea, and has cured violent cases of Asiatic cholera.

A kind of cushion of powdered ice kept to the entire scalp, has allayed violent inflammation of the brain, and arrested fearful convulsions induced by too much blood there.

Water, as cool as ice can make it, applied freely to the throat, neck and chest with a sponge or cloth, very often affords an almost miraculous relief, and if this be followed by drinking copiously of the same ice cold element, the wetted parts wiped dry, and the child be wrapped up well in the bed clothes, it falls into a delightful and life-giving slumber.

All inflammations, internal or external, are promptly subdued by the application of ice or ice-water, because it is converted into steam and rapidly conveys away the extra heat, and also diminishes the quantity of blood in the vessels of the part.

A piece of ice laid on the wrist will often arrest violent bleeding of the nose. To drink any ice-cold liquid at meals retards digestion, chills the body, and has been known to induce the most dangerous internal congestions.

If ice is put in milk or on butter, and these are not used at the time, they lose their freshness, and become sour and stale; for the essential nature of both is changed, when once frozen and then thawed.—[Hall's Journal of Health.
